chinese traditions of confucianism daoism and buddhism have a profoundly philosophical dimension the three traditions are frequently referred to as three paths of moral teachings in this book mou provides a clear account of the textual corpus that emerges to define each of these traditions and how this canonical axis was augmented by a continuing commentarial tradition as each generation reauthorized the written core for their own time and place in his careful exegesis mou lays out the differences between the more religious reading of these traditions with their defining practices that punctuate the human journey through life and the more intellectual and philosophical treatment of the texts that has and continues to produce a first order culture of annotation that become integral to the traditions themselves at the center of the alternative religious experience reflected throughout the teachings of confucianism daoism and buddhism is the project of personal cultivation as it comes to be expressed as robust growth in family and communal relations for mou these three highly distinctive and yet complementary ways of thinking and living constitute a kind of moral ecology wherein each of them complements the others as they stand in service to a different dimension of the human need for an educated spirituality in the second half of the twentieth century the failure of enlightenment rationalism and the spiritual bankruptcy of western materialism have opened the door for eastern religions especially the nontheistic religions that promise enlightenment and peace of mind any major bookstore today has copies of the i ching the tao te ching and books on taoism zen and other forms of buddhism this volume and the volume on hinduism in this series together present a comprehensive overview of eastern religions their views and their impact on contemporary north america this book includes a concise introduction to eastern religions an overview of the movement s theology in their own words a biblical response tips for witnessing effectively a bibliography with sources for further study a chart comparing the groups beliefs with biblical christianity a glossary after the warring states treated in part one of this set there is no more fecund era in chinese religious and cultural history than the period of division 220 589 ad during it buddhism conquered china daoism grew into a mature religion with independent institutions and together with confucianism these three teachings having each won its share of state recognition and support formed a united front against shamanism while all four religions are covered buddhism and daoism receive special attention in a series of parallel chapters on their pantheons rituals sacred geography community organization canon formation impact on literature and recent archaeological discoveries this multi disciplinary approach without ignoring philosophical and theological issues brings into sharp focus the social and historical matrices of chinese religion for too many students christian theology is learned in isolation from other religions traditions with this the second volume of her important work kristin johnston largen returns to expand the systematic theology she began in the original volume largen places the work of christian theology soundly within the interreligious dialogue that is the defining feature of our time in doing so she prepares students of theology for the task of understanding and articulating their christian beliefs in the context of a religiously and culturally diverse world in the original volume largen focused her work on three loci god creation and humanity in this second volume she expands the project to include salvation the church and the holy spirit as before each locus is set within the broader context of interreligious dialogue by considering how the varied beliefs of the world s religious traditions inform our understanding of our own tradition this volume explores indigenous religions sikhism confucianism and daoism in particular volume two of marylin rhie s widely acclaimed and formative multi volume work presents a comprehensive scholarly and detailed study of the buddhist art of china and central asia from 316 439 a d during the formative early periods of buddhism in the eastern chin and sixteen kingdoms period using texts translated from the chinese together with stylistic and technical analyses the chronology and sources of the art are more clearly defined than in previous studies for the regions of south and north china other than kansu and the important sites of tumshuk kucha and karashahr on the northern silk route in eastern central asia furthermore by incorporating extensive religious and historical materials this work not only contributes to clarifying the regional characteristics of the art but also offers new insights into the broader interregional relationships of this politically fragmented period like an ancient river daoist traditions introduced from china once flowed powerfully through the japanese religious landscape forever altering its topography and ecology daoism s presence in japan still may be discerned in its abiding influence on astrology divination festivals literature politics and popular culture not to mention buddhism and shintō despite this legacy few english language studies of daoism s influence on japanese religious culture have been published daoism in japan provides an exploration of the particular pathways by which daoist traditions entered japan from continental east asia after addressing basic issues in both daoist studies and the study of japanese religions including the problems of defining daoism and japanese the book looks at the influence of daoism on ancient medieval and modern japan in turn to do so the volume is arranged both chronologically and topically according to the following three broad divisions arrivals c 5th 8th centuries ce assimilations 794 1868 and apparitions 1600s present the book demonstrates how chinese influence on japanese religious culture ironically proved to be crucial in establishing traditions that usually are seen as authentically even quintessentially japanese touching on multiple facets of japanese cultural history and religious traditions this book is a fascinating contribution for students and scholars of japanese culture history and religions as well as daoist studies this book presents an analytical investigation of the christian concept of reconciliation and the daoist concept of harmony it poses the question whether christian reconciliation and daoist harmony could be operationalized in ways to ease human suffering caused by interpersonal intergroup national and international conflicts christianity and daoism both describe the loss of harmonious connections with fellow humans nature and the sacred but they also point to ways of reconciliation to returning to harmony through re connection as an interreligious dialogue between daoism and christianity has hardly ever been described before this study focuses on the question within a hermeneutical context of singularity difference and concordance whether early daoist views on harmony and early christian views on reconciliation could be operationalized relevantly in order to contribute to endeavors towards a resolution of interpersonal and intergroup conflicts too often buddhism has been subjected to the procrustean box of western thought whereby it is stretched to fit fixed categories or had essential aspects lopped off to accommodate vastly different cultural norms and aims after several generations of scholarly discussion in english speaking communities it is time to move to the next hermeneutical stage buddhist philosophy must be liberated from the confines of a quasi religious stereotype and judged on its own merits hence this work will approach chinese buddhism as a philosophical tradition in its own right not as an historical after thought nor as an occasion for comparative discussions that assume the west alone sets the standards for or is the origin of philosophy and its methodologies viewed within their own context chinese buddhist philosophers have much to contribute to a wide range of philosophical concerns including metaphysics epistemology ethics philosophy of language philosophy of mind and philosophy of religion even though western divisions of philosophy may not exhaust the rich contents of chinese buddhist philosophy confucianism and daoism absorbing and mutually transforming new horizons especially buddhism attention to the writings of matteo ricci and potential christian contributions to modern development in chinese culture
